FREDERICTON (CNB) - A one-time donation of $2,500 was made recently to the Fredericton Native Friendship Centre by Post-Secondary Education, Training and Labour Minister Ed Doherty, who is also minister responsible for aboriginal affairs.

The centre provides assistance to all aboriginal people and their families who are new to the city. It is also the first-stop resource to establish contacts for education, employment/training and social programs.

"This contribution will go a long way in helping with the increased number of individuals who visit the centre, especially during this time of year," Doherty said.

The Aboriginal Affairs Secretariat grants program was created to provide an opportunity to improve the provincial government's ability to address aboriginal issues. The program supports small-scale non-profit projects of a social, cultural and educational nature to help improve the government's relationship with First Nations communities and aboriginal organizations.
